Hi All,

I have not heard from anyone that the 4-6pm timeslot will not work for them, so I am going to revise and resend the Outlook invitation for that time.

Josh,
Would you please respond to all and let us know if you will host the meeting for Butte-based participants at your office? Also, if others feel strongly that some of the out of towners should travel to Butte for the meeting, please speak up.

I could potentially fly in that day if that is preferred.

Roz

Hi All,

I have made good progress on the draft report the last few days. I expect to have a final draft to you all for review by the end of next week. Although Seth suggested needing a few days to review, I think realistically everyone will need several weeks and a bit more due to the holidays. This final draft will include the WG statement at the beginning (with my edits to the version from Joe, considering also the version from John), the executive summary and the final draft of our recommendations. I will also send a draft stand alone "Fact sheet" based on the longer statement drafted by Steve and Bill. The report revisions I am making now respond to comments from Steve, Seth, Lynn, Josh, and Brandon, plus our discussions of recommendations. If that misses anyone's comments, please let me know. I can also circulate some of these sections sooner as standalone documents if that would make review easier. Please let me know your thoughts.

I recommend that we try to still hold our next call to discuss the health study report on January 13th and would like to hear who would not be able to attend if we move the time up to 4pm mountain. I think we should plan on 2 hours instead of 1.5 hours for this meeting. Please respond to me only with times you could be available on the 13th and other good days that week if 4-6 on the 13th doesn't work. I will let everyone know what I hear back. If too many folks can't attend this one meeting at 4pm, I will follow Dave's suggestion of a survey monkey with alternate dates.

If we are able to move the time to 4pm, I would ask Josh if he can host a projected webinar at AR's offices for all Butte-based attendees, while the rest of us would call in. I agree we may soon need a meeting with everyone in person, but for this next meeting, I am hoping this format might alleviate the problems viewing the webinar.

In terms of future meetings, I don't think we have yet agreed on frequency. Perhaps we can work on that at the next meeting and then agree on timing and which ones will be in person for all attendees.

One additional thought. We may find that we need a separate call before the 13th to continue discussions about new studies. We need to be able to devote the entire call on the 13th to review of the health study report, so I recommend any needed discussions of other studies occur on a separately scheduled call. If so, I can also use the survey monkey to try to find a time for an interim meeting on other studies.

Regards,
Roz

Despite my email on Monday, I can be flexible with meeting times as well. Perhaps an online poll, such as Survey Monkey, would allow us to find times acceptable for all. I also agree that face to face is preferable when it is possible. I have had endless problems using the video conferencing platform and usually end up calling in.

Thanks,
David

I agree with Josh's suggestions. While teaching presents a more flexible schedule than most work, I can empathize with a situation where one works all day and then must attend a meeting at night. I also much prefer face to face meetings.

I also think we need, as the Health Study Working Group, to concentrate on the current, as Josh put it, deliverable and need to develop a communications plan for its public release.

With all the health studies in the public domain now, and, as I understand, another on brain cancer rates and toxics in Butte coming out next week, our study will be competing with a plethora of health information. We need to make sure that our lead levels study is not lost in the crowd of health reports.

We may or may not as a group want to invest time in the current infant meconium health pre study and the study that is coming out on brain cancer at a later date, but we should focus now on what we are charged with delivering.

We can get to the other stuff later if we choose.

Now we need to develop a press release and communications plan for publicizing this study. That should be a priority.

I'm willing to be flexible as well, though I much prefer face-to-face to prevent technical glitches and improve overall communications.

I request that our agenda get back to focusing on the current deliverable. As such I believe most of our individual time will be spent reading on our own, suggesting edits to online documents, and group discussion to finalize edits prior to submittal. Hand in hand with this effort we should engage our communications teams to prepare a press release and develop holding statements in the event of media inquiry.

Appreciate everyone's commitment to this important work.

Thanks Seth,

I agree, and perhaps there is a compromise as far as alternating the Work Group meeting between starting at 4pm and 6pm. We could start the next one at 4 pm (thoughts?).

Roz,

Can you give the group a better idea of next submittal and we can schedule something for one or two weeks after that submittal.

All,

I would request that we set the date & time for the next 'working group' meeting, as soon as possible. This is not to say we need to meet ASAP, but rather we need to get a date & time on the books, as advanced notice allows for the greatest participation from members in the group. I still think an evening meeting is preferable, so as to maximize attendance by those individuals with other daytime obligations, but I understand that not everyone shares this preference.

I would also request that the final(?) draft documents (e.g. public health statement, executive summary, technical document) be sent out several days in advance of the meeting to allow individuals to review prior to the meeting.

Respectfully,
Seth Cornell
